Category: CAD software Category: Computer-aided design software for Windows (who was previously with the Chicago department of transportation, looking at the design of parking lots) worked for me to help design the path up to the top of the park. Barry had a lot of confidence in my designs and so did Leslie, the designer. We were able to get a very high quality result that would be suitable for a variety of different users. I also worked with a landscape architect and graphic designer to look at a few different ways to present the site to the public. A special thanks to Michelle Aquino, who worked with me to make sure the plans were accurate. The following two videos illustrate a good overview of the completed project. The first video comes from the 7th Annual Green Fest. It was filmed on May 24, 2008 and is about 45 minutes in length. This video is my effort to present the design of the new Martin Luther King, Jr. Park in Chicago. This video shows a very brief overview of the path on top of the new park. The park itself was completed on February 4th, 2009. The following interactive video shows the path on top of the park. If you mouse over the elements, you will get explanations of the features. The view shown is a panoramic image and allows you to see the path. There is also a panoramic map of the park that you can look at. The following two videos show the details of the path on top of the park. The first video is a zoomed-in view and the second video is a 360-degree view. The following interactive video shows the view of the lake from the top of the park. It allows you to pan around and look at ca3bfb1094
