I Hate Santa Features Key:

This isn't the New Year's resolution game. Avoid the suffering.
This is a fast-paced funny game that will last for just thirty minutes or so. Laughing is guaranteed!
A ruthless Santa is chasing you around the place without giving you a chance to catch his breath. Watch out for the red dot on your screen (which is his eye).
There's a secret code to the game. Memorize it now before you forget!
The soundtrack is downloadable.

How to play:

It's one thing per level. You are on red trail and can only go in one direction. Laughing too hard at the 3D-Sometime-Santa, who is after you, is against the rules. Bet for points. Collect blue, yellow and white stars to boost your mood and increase the accuracy of your move. When you're picked up, press Ctrl + Padlock keys to continue.

How long can you last? Have fun and have a good time!

Good luck!

"Its mean! People make fun of the man who brings presents under the Christmas tree! You run around the house dragging those mean guys and dragging their gifts with you. It gives you a chance to score points and if you manage to drag Santa with you, you earn an extra point! You need to drag them over your footprints to keep them in the snow. You have to drag them to the stairs or your opponents will jump out from behind you and attack you. You need to be quick or Santa gets away!" Graphics: 9.5/10 It looks really detailed and very graphic. I haven't found any bugs at all. Music: 10/10 I Hate Santa has the Best audio on this game because it has great music and will keep you on your toes. Game Difficulty: 3.75/10 The tricky part is finding where the enemies hide in the house. But there's only four of them on the first level and they aren't that hard to catch. You have to look for them on each level. Replay Value: 9/10 You could play this game forever! You'll constantly be fighting off those elves. Overall: 8/10 Its a very nice Christmas game and the sequel is planned. I would give I Hate Santa a 9.0/10 for now. And I am a fan of Silent Hill and Portal games, so I'm looking forward to The Church. We'll see. ... Verdict: Probably the best title on my list this year so far. It has a really nice atmosphere and music. I hate Santa gives you a good challenge but it can be frustrating at times and its still a nice game. But some of the puzzle parts are a little tricky to figure out and I found myself just giving up when it came to dragging Santa. But the music is great and there's a very nice story that I found interesting. So I Hate Santa is a fun, easy Christmas game with a lot to love. What's new:

Claus and I Want a Racist Santa Claus I Hate Santa Claus and I Want a Racist Santa Claus is a bumper sticker distributed across the U.S. by the creative team at Top Shell Design. It was started by Michael Abraham, a San Diego resident who created a top-rated, top-selling website at Long Beach Comic Con from 2005 to 2013. The sticker goes around the claim that Santa Claus and his helpers are associated with consumerism, with a website link at the bottom, to the website; it goes on to label itself as an egalitarian one. One of several highly unlikely expositions of one's belief in the basic egalitarianism of Santa Claus, the text reads as follows: Santa Claus and the North Pole depend on 'slavery' in Africa A graphic version of this sticker is seen on John Edwards December 2008 St. Cloud, MN campaign plane that crashed in Marion, NC. "I'm not saying that the North Pole is like Nags Head" image used by the campaign office in OH and a cropped version used in 2008 MN Democratic convention It refers to Christmas mythology involving a "Red Queen" dispute between Aesop and Thales of Miletus (476-c424 BC) as well as to a 1989 book of the same name, Santa Claus and the Red-Wearing Queen, that states "Through the centuries, Thales has always been the Red Queen. She has "enjoyed" (this usage seems to mean "ruled over" in this context) the red color in the east and the white color in the west." as its featured quote. Origin In December 2004 Abraham was driving down Interstate 8 when he saw that another car was stopped at a construction site. He stated in an interview that he decided to put the sticker on his car, as he was under the impression that the notice was for people driving cars behind his car. Abraham received about 20 complaints and many e-mails about the sticker, which has since become an internet phenomenon with 95,000 bumper sticker sellers, roughly half of them in the U.S., according to Abraham. The sticker has evolved across the United States. Shorter versions of the sticker have been commonly seen on cars of people driving in California. The sticker was also seen on a food truck in San Diego, with the Santa Claus-as-Santa costume being changed to Republican figures. A version was later added as the official pro choice sticker
