(v4.7.2)Chlorosulfonylation-sensitive nucleophilic substitution of the chlorine atom in a biaryl compound with a free radical chlorosulfonylation agent: diversity-oriented synthesis of biaryl sulfonyl halides. A novel approach for access to bioactive sulfonyl chlorides is reported. The key step of this transformation consists of a general and selective method that allows for the access of biaryl sulfonyl chlorides through the selective substitution of the chlorine atom in the biaryl compound by a free radical chlorosulfonylation reagent. The method is highly versatile and allows for the late-stage introduction of a variety of functional groups. Furthermore, using simple experimental conditions, it is possible to obtain from the reaction sulfonyl chlorides in moderate to good yields, thus allowing for the development of synthetic methodology for the late-stage functionalization of biologically active compounds.Page BREAKING (update): PM faces fresh Brexit questions after two ministers quit LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Theresa May addressed Parliament for the first time since Tuesday's cabinet resignations, saying her decision to go for a third time was the only way to deliver on the vote of the British people in the 2016 Brexit referendum.The U.K. leader did not directly address the Cabinet resignations, saying it had been an "ambitious and historic" plan to lead Britain out of the European Union.But May's critics have continued to portray her decision to ask for a "short, limited" extension to the current Brexit process as a cop out. British Foreign Secretary Boris Johnson, one of her main critics, resigned Tuesday morning, hours after Brexit Secretary David Davis quit along with four other ministers. They said May was trying to hide from the "dire circumstances" facing Britain as it heads toward leaving the bloc on March 29.May called the June 2016 vote to leave the EU a "historic decision for which we fought and won." "Our country was faced with a decision of great moment and scale, but it also presents an opportunity," she said. "We have therefore set a target of leaving the European Union on the 29th of March. Although the process of negotiating this departure has been difficult, the destination we seek, a deep and special partnership with our friends and allies in the European Union, is

The need for air cargo capacity is growing rapidly, but is overly reliant on expensive range extensions and heavy fuel consumption. They are expensive, but actual cargo weight limits are reached far earlier than for passenger airplanes. The aim is to make an alternative to cargo airplanes in the pressurized cargo market. Ducted fans provide high pressure, as free stream fans. Store all the cargo in tight bays, as in passenger airplanes, to avoid blocking the other cargo aircraft while waiting for a space to become free. Therefore, there is little or no crew space for loading or unloading of the cargo. The solutions that are found will be used in a single bay environment making it passenger airplane like. The cargo aircraft will become cargo cargo aircraft. Objectives 1. Implement ducted fans, which are used in airports, to produce 10% thrust with a mass flow of 25 kg/s2. 2. Implement aerodynamic profiles and shapes for the main engines, main gear, and cargo doors. 3. Implement different aerodynamic profiles for different speeds, for example, 10 kn, 15 kn, and 22 kn. 4. Implement cabin pressure effects, for example, cabin altitudes of 30 m, 40 m, and 50 m. 5. Design digital mock-ups. 6. Fully analyze the energy conditions for the solution,

The ultimate version of the game is coming with a brand new retuned gameplay system, a brand new graphic engine and a brand new soundtrack. It will also feature 4 new side-quests, and 5 new professions and companions!Field of the Invention The present disclosure relates to the field of networking. More specifically, the present disclosure relates to interconnecting networks using a framing protocol. Description of the Related Art The amount of content delivered by content providers to various users through networks continues to increase. Networks have evolved to deliver to users content such as email, Web pages, game graphics, and videos. Current networks deliver content through many heterogeneous access technologies that are not designed for true multimedia applications. Further, current networks do not provide secure communications between the user and content provider. In an effort to overcome these problems, the Internet Engineering Task Force (IETF) has developed a number of protocols and standards for content delivery networks. The Session Initiation Protocol (SIP) developed by the IETF is an example of a signaling protocol used to establish and manage sessions. Using SIP, content may be piped between signaling nodes using as little bandwidth as possible and with high performance. SIP allows applications to use one or more centralized signaling nodes to implement end-to-end communication for sessions. Examples of SIP services include call forwarding, multimedia conferencing, and managing voicemail. Through a number of SIP extensions, SIP is further designed to define multimedia messaging services (MMS). MMS is a push-type of multimedia messaging. MMS typically carries a single multimedia file and may be delivered to a cellular phone. MMS may be broadcast
