Activision Games Posted on April 18, 2020, 3:12 pm.(Photo credit: Thomas Coex/AFP/Getty Images) Updated on July 17 at 12:28 p.m.: On July 17, in the most embarrassing moment of his presidency, Trump once again demonstrated his penchant for inconsistency by having a literal difference of opinion with some people. In a Fox News interview, Trump told Bill O'Reilly that during his presidential campaign, he promised a number of black voters, including one who said, "I can't wait to vote for Trump, I'm black and I'm proud." O'Reilly informed Trump that he had forgotten such a promise. "You said that to an African American?" O'Reilly asked. "I never said it," Trump said. "But he's saying it," O'Reilly responded. "He's saying that he will vote for me. He's saying that I said, 'I can't wait to vote for Trump.'" "He said that? That's the first I've heard that," Trump said. On top of the comment about being proud of his black supporter, Trump also failed to provide the black man — who he refused to identify by name and who was not interviewed by the mainstream media — with the unemployment rate in the U.S. for blacks at the time
