Your kids may be chatting on Skype and downloading unauthorized videos and music. You suspect that your spouse might be looking at naughty websites or playing online video games. You might be wrong, but the point is that you should know what your kids are doing on their computer and how long they spend on it. A software called Free Keystroke Spy Software is a tool that can tell you. It captures user logins and emails and generates a list of the websites that were visited by your kids. It could save you from embarrassing or potentially dangerous situations. Keystroke spy software is a computer program that can monitor your kids' computer activities. The monitoring is done by an online agent that is installed on the targeted computer. This agent sniffs out information about the computer's users and what they do on the computer. The following information is collected: Mouse clicks, keyboard strikes and other keystrokes. The recording can be activated at any time, whether the user is connected to the internet or not. The monitoring is virtually undetectable, as it does not use any kind of software to be installed on the computer. On the contrary, it sneaks in from the internet to snoop without leaving any trace. The monitoring agent is able to capture your kid's online activities, such as:

Skype chat, websites visited, pictures, games, music and movies. You may be interested to know that these activities are stored in a time-lapse way. That is, your kids may be wasting your money on expensive Facebook account or downloading music illegally, but you will only get information about it after a certain period has lapsed. For example, if a child spends 1,5 hours on the internet, the information will appear on the report only after 3 hours. If it appears that the child is chatting with several friends, then it will be safe to assume
